

Korean Government Supports German Internship

HRD Korea, the Korean governmental organization for human resources development, is supporting German companies to find highly skilled young Koreans as employees. Last year, we successfully supported 650 overseas internships and employment of 3,000 Korean young people. With our diverse network which includes Korean universities and colleges, we select the best students for positions on an as-needed basis.

Also as part of the governmental initiative, HRD Korea is subsidizing internships for a period of 6 months. On the back of the success of the German Mittelstand Internship 2015, we would like to invite more German companies to become involved in the Korean government overseas internship program called K-Move, a Korean state-run program to support young professionals entry into global companies.

Program Overview

- Participating companies: Leading German companies
- Participating interns: Korean students in their senior year with majors as required by participating companies
- Benefits to companies: Financial support, Selection based on companies' requirements, Pre-training (Language and business culture), Visas
